

Human Rights Organizations

Demand United States of America, United Kingdom, and France Stop Playing the Role of World Policeman

Assume Responsibilities for the Maintenance of International Peace and Security and Respect for the Charter of the United Nations

The human rights organizations that have signed this statement express their condemnation of the aggression of United States of America, United Kingdom, and France against The Security Council has operated outside the Council's frameworks and resolutions, in violation of international law and the Syria, a founding member of the United Nations. purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, specially violating Paragraph 4 Article 2 which provides that "All Members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state, or in any other manner inconsistent with the Purposes of the United Nations."

The Security Council has failed to follow conventional mechanisms to verify the use or non-use of chemical weapons. Although we express our condemnation of any use of chemical weapons and internationally prohibited weapons from anyone, anywhere, including Syria, we demand that the Organization for Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW) carry out its work unhindered by anyone, so as to identify the truth of the allegations of the use of chemical weapons and to bring the perpetrators, if proven, to international justice. In this context, the signatories of this statement say that no State or group of States has the right to simultaneously establish itself as the investigator, a prosecutor and judge by issuing both a judgment and enforcement regime at the same time.

We recall the failure of the Security Council to issue a statement on the Israeli use of excessive and deadly force to disperse Palestinian peaceful demonstrators who exercised their right to express their views on their own land and posed no threat to anyone, while permanent members invade groups to protect terrorism, most of which are listed on terrorist lists.

The parties to any dispute, The signatories are increasingly concerned when these three States violate their Article 33 of the Charter of the United Nations, which provides that "the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, shall, first of all, seek a solution by negotiation, enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements, or other peaceful means of their own choice

This is especially true given that a team of international investigators of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons arrived in Beirut two days before the aggression.

This tripartite aggression also violates the content of United Nations General Assembly resolution 2734 (Session 25) of 16 December 1970, which calls on “all States to refrain from the threat or use of force, overt or covert, and refrain from any

To refrain from organizing, instigating, assisting or ... any other State or country; Attempt aimed at the partial or total disruption of the national unity and territorial integrity of participating in acts of civil strife or another State." in terrorist acts

Human rights organizations insist that the Security Council member States, in particular the permanent members, be required to comply with international law and apply it equally to all violators and ex-combatants, particularly to certain permanent members which have destroyed states, caused crises and wars, fabricated lies to destroy Iraq, created millions of victims, and lied to scores of world leaders.

As the law of force prevails over the force of law, the international community needs, more than ever, to be credible and moral and to uphold international law and the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, and safeguard international peace and security.
